

Pre-Professional Health Sciences

Bachelor of Science

What is Pre-Professional Health Sciences?

If you're interested in a career in healthcare, a degree in Pre-Professional Health Sciences from South Dakota Mines will set you up for success.

This program prepares students like you for admission into a variety of graduate and professional programs, including medical and dental schools, physical and occupational therapy programs, physician assistant and chiropractic programs, and optometry and radiography programs.

What does a pre-professional health scientist do?

Pre-professional health science students take rigorous science and math courses from across the curriculum to prepare for admission to graduate and professional programs.

The majority of South Dakota Mines Pre-Professional Health Sciences majors go on to professional healthcare programs, including medical school. The outlook for jobs in healthcare is extremely positive, with healthcare careers expected to grow 15% from 2019 to 2029. Learn more about the medical professions our graduates have pursued - Pre-Health Profiles.

Many South Dakota Mines Pre-Professional Health Sciences grads go on to graduate school or professional healthcare programs, including medical school.

Careers

- Medicine
- Dentistry
- Pharmacy
- Physical Therapy
- Physician Assistant
- Chiropractic
- Optometry
- Occupational Therapy
- Orthotics/Prosthetics
- Public Health
- Veterinary Medicine
- Psychology
- Genetic Counseling
- Pathologists' Assistant
- Medical Laboratory Science
- Medical Radiography
- Accelerated Nursing

SOUTH
DAKOTA
MINES

For more information: <https://www.sdsmt.edu/Academics/Degrees/PreMed/>

Advancing the frontier of innovation